DELEGATION FROM HAMMOND CALLS ON THE GOVERNOR.

But the Attorney-General Leaves to Ask for an Injunction at Crown

Ex-Congressman Thomas Hammond, of Hammond, headed a delegation of members of the City Council of Hammond who called upon Governor Matthews late yesterday afternoon to beg for mercy for the Roby racing outfit. They were accompanied by ex-Senator Johannes Kopelke, of Crown Point, who has been assisting the Attorney-general in the legal fight against the Roby people, and held a long conference with the Governor and Attorneygeneral. The Hammond delegation declared that the racing at Roby, Sheffield and Forsythe was not nearly so bad a gambling institution as had been represented here. They said as a matter of fact horses in the country, the racing was | 15, 1895. squarely conducted and the crowds in attendance were entirely orderly. They did not want the thing forced to the wall because the daily crowds of people in atendance and the large forces of men necessary to conduct the tracks and care for the horses were a source of considera-

The State authorities did not give them any satisfaction upon the subject and were careful not to say what their next step in the matter will be. After they had gone, the Governor expressed the opinion that the chief object of the visit was to find out what course the State intended to pursue. Since the decision of the Supreme Court reversing the Lake Circuit Court and commanding it in terms to grant an injunction against the various racing associations, no further proceedings have been had, while the races have gone on just the same. The Attorney-general left for Crown Point last night with a certificate of the Supreme Court's decision in his pocket, and will to-day ask for a permanent injunction against the Roby peo-

All answered to their names with the exception of Alfred Tensel and were given the usual fine of one cent and Marshal Newhouse, of Brightwood, arrested McFarren yesterday on a warrant charging him with assault and battery on William Hartley and T. D. Helper on the night of July 16. McFarren was one of the gang that attacked the two young men as they were escorting two young ladies to plant. a party. Marshal Newhouse has had a warrant for Herman Pursell, who is claimed to be a principal in the attack which he has carried for over a week, but he was unable to find Pursell until yesterday. The marshal placed him under arrest and he pleaded guilty to the charge in Magistrate Sears's court yesterday and was Passed No Counterfeits Here.

Major Carter, of the United States Secret Service, is not inclined to believe the report from Louisville that Mrs. Brill and her sen, arrested there for passing counterfeit money, had circulated any of the spurious coin here. A telegram states that the woman and her son were arrested at Louisville while in the act of passing counterfelt silver dollars. It is also stated spurious dollars have been passed in this city for a long time.

She Is Insane Again.

Mrs. Drucilla Washington, colored, the wife of Charles Washington, is at the police station, from where she will be sent to the Insane Hospital. She was formerly a patient at the hospital. Yesterday afternoon she became unbalanced again and created a great deal of excitement in the neighborhood of Illinois and Maryland streets. She and her husband have rooms in a block at the corner. The organization has tried three times to obtain the one-fare rate, and this time the lines have finally refused to consider the matter again, and the Sons of Veterans must remain content with the rate of one and one-third fare which was granted them in the first instance.

The chairman of the Western Passenger Association has granted relief to the interested lines in the matter of the meeting of fire chiefs at Sait Lake City. Several of the lines were anxious to meet competition as to stop-overs west of Colorado fares tendered from Ohio river crossings common points and travel by diverse routes, and this has been granted them by the chairman.

The Flat Cars on Street-Railroad in the funeral of the Rev. J. W. Swick, action to books, the "Life of David" cago, making a differential of 10 cents above action taken by the Missouri Pacific in the interest of St. Louis will, of course, be met by the other lines and a bitter war is imminent. In this connection the Kansas City Star says: "The Union Pacific rallway made a popular move yesterday by announcing a conditional flat rate on grain shipments to Kansas City from Kansas points. The Union Pacific agrees to accept its proportion of the through rate to St. Louis, which means about a 50 per cent, reduction in existing rates. Many of the lines have been making through rates in favor of St. Louis, which have injured Kansas City's grain interests. The action of the Union Pacific is in line with that of the Burlington railway, which yesterday announced low flat rates on corn into Kansas City from Missouri and Iowa points.' The Kansas City, Fort Scott & Memphis railway yesterday cut the export rate for grain from Kansas City to the Gulf of Mexico nearly in two, announcing a rate of 12 cents per 100 pounds on wheat and 10 cents on corn from Kansas City to Southport, La. The Southern Rate War. Vice President St. John, of the Seabcard Air-line, announced yesterday the intention of that company to continue its fight against the Southern railway. He declares the Southern has established a line of steamers between Baltimore and Norfolk needlessly in order to destroy the existing lines and not because the Southern's business required it. He added: "We have been unable, because of the influence of the Southern, to run sleepers to and from New York as the Southern does. We have been trying for three years to do this, and we will accomplish it, although at present it is unlawfully denied us. We have been thwarted by the same influence in our Atlanta and New Orleans business, but the nterstate-commerce law will sooner or later, be in force on this case. Our determination to secure our rights may cause the rate war to last for months and possi-bly for years, but we believe the shippers and people will support us."

Proportional Coast Rates. The roads of the Transcontinental Passenger Association have determined to take up the question of proportional coast rates that has caused them so much trouble in the past, and this time they expect to get the matter settled and out of the way for good. Some time ago the chairman of the association requested the accounting departments of all the roads in the association to furnish him with statements of the business done from Buffalo. Suspension Bridge and adjacent territory to the Pacific coast points. Some of the roads have responded, but others have been very slow in complying with the request, and the delinquents are now sharply urged to have their statements prepared at once, as the association is anxious to take up the matter at its next meeting and dispose of it. The statements asked the tracks attracted some of the best for are for the business done since Feb.

Empty Cars in Demand.

Caused by the reduction of grain rates to Southern points, there is a heavy de-Missouri Pacific stations in Northern Kansas and Nebraska. The reduction, rates has resulted in much corn being sold for July delivery and heavy shipments of the cereal have already begun. Many cribs are filled with last year's corn, and the owners must get rid of it to make room for the new crop. Atchison county farmers are predicting 100 bushels of corn to the acre as the yield of the new crop.

The heads of departments of the Big Four will hold a meeting at Benton Harbor, Mich., on Tuesday next. The Central Freight Association will hold an adjourned meeting at Chicago early the coming week to study special grain rates. Should the weather prove favorable the Big Four expects to have the largest excursion to Cincinnati to-morrow that it has ever sent out.

George L. Bradbury, vice president and general manager of the Lake Erie & Western, who has been in the East for some time, is expected home on Monday. William A. Davis, chief engineer of the electric plant of the Union Railway Company, has resigned his position and is succeeded by Michael Eagin, formerly chief engineer of the Citizen's street-railway

The Big Four, encouraged by the success of its new Toledo-Detroit line, will extend the service by running the Cincinnati-Detroit sleeper through to Port Huron via the Grand Trunk. This will enable passengers from the south to secure the benefit of through sleeping cars to Mount Clemens, Lenox and other resorts. The Baltimore & Ohio has suffered great trouble and inconvenience from washouts

that all repairs had been completed and the Chairman Tramwell, of the Georgia Rail-road Commission, has dealt a heavy blow to the warring railway managers in the matter of the cutting of rates on through business from the north Atlantic points to Atlanta. He informs them that the commission will not stand by and see local business sacrificed. He plainly informs them that rates on local traffic must be cut to correspond with reductions in through business.

The number of railway employes killed in the United States during the year ending lune 30 was 1,811, and the number injured 5,696; passengers killed, 170; injured, 2,375. The number of passengers killed is remarkably small, being only one out of each 213,651 carried. The liability of passengers that 71,696,743 passenger miles were accomplished for every passenger killed, and 5,131,977 passenger miles for every passenger injured. F. C. The Chicago Chronicle says: "Travel between Cleveland and Chicago is cheap now. The rate formerly was $8.50, but now two roads are cutting it, and selling pasteboards at $5 for the round trip. If this price is too high a visit to a scalper's office may result in getting another big reduction, as it is alleged that orders for passage have been nonored by the roads without even the south of the Union Pacific 10 cents per formality of selling the tickets to the brokhundred pounds less than the rates to Gal- ers. Line Used for Transportation to Fairview Park.

Fairview Park yesterday began to assume a military character, and there was much hustling to and fro of the forces which the quartermaster-generals of the various regiments had upon the grounds getting their stores in readiness for the quick work of pitching camp to-night. There is always great rivalry among the C. various companies in the matter of getting in shape with the least possible waste of time after arriving at camp. The Citizens' Street-railroad Company has all its flat cars in service, and this has greatly facilitated the transportation of stores to the grounds, and it will be of further assistance yet made since the present grain-rate war in moving the artillery and munitions of war upon the arrival of the troops this afternoon and evening.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL LESSON

ELUCIDATION AND REVIEW OF IN-TERNATIONAL TOPIC, JULY 26.

God's Promises to David, as Set Forth in Second Samuel vii, 4-16-

To Each His Appropriate Work.

By REV. JAMES E. GILBERT, Secretary of American Society of Religious

INTRODUCTION .- Our last lesson closed abruptly with the statement of the fact that David, on the second attempt, brought the ark from the house of Obed-Edom to Jerusalem. The remainder of the chapter (vi, 13-23) records several interesting circumstances connected with that event-the cacrifice offering, the dancing of the King, the contempt of Michal, his wife, his response and her virtual rejection, and the large gifts of David to the people. Some time after, when peaceably possessed of his kingdom, victorious over all his enemies, David, while sitting in his palace, considered how he might further employ himself in the service of God. When it occurred to him that he lived in a house of cedar and the ark was meanly lodged, he conceived the idea of building a magnificent temple for its reception. Disclosing his thoughts to Nathan, the prophet, he was encouraged by that eminent man, who felt assured that the purpose originated in zeal for the glory of God, and that therefore God would prosper the undertaking and conduct it to success. (Ch. vii, 1-3.) NATHAN,-David's adviser deserves more extended notice. Younger than Gad, who also occupied the position of public teacher, Nathan was latest direct representative of the schools of the prophets, imbued with much of the spirit of Samuel, the founder of those schools. That he was a good man, worthy of confidence, is evident from his words on this occasion. That he did not lack courage to speak his convictions is proved by the fact that he reproved David for his sin with Bath-she-ba, and his famous apologue on the rich man and the ewe lamb shows that his prophetic power was of a very high order. (II Sam. xitt, 12.) David esteemed Nathan as a counselor and friend, appointing him the instructor of Solomon, his son (II Sam. xii, 24, 25), and assigning him to assist in Solomon's inauguration. (1 Kings 1, 8-10.) Nathan (I Chron, xxix, 29), and the "Life of Solomon" (II Chron. ix, 29), now unfortunately lost. The ecnsideration in which he was held in both reigns is indicated by the manner of announcing him on FORBIDDEN .- On the night succeeding the interview with the King, Nathan had a vision, and the Lord spoke to him (Verse 4), fulfilling the promise made to Moses concerning the prophetic office. (Numb. xii, 6.) He was directed to go to David with an extended message which occupies the remainder of our lesson. The first part of that message is here given in the form of a evident that the question was followed by an answer, omitted in this passage, but recorded elsewhere (1 Chron. xvii, 4), in which David is forbidden to build, thus reversing Nathan's former advice. By this it apppears that good men, even after consultation, both moved by pure motives, one at the head of the nation, the other God's inspired representative, may err when they come at first to consider a subject, and that the decisions and plans of one day may be revised and abandoned under the added light that may come out of God's word. There were two encouraging features in the message to Nathan-David was called "my servant" by the Almighty, and the thing which he proposed was acknowledged to be praiseworthy. (I Kings viii, 16.) This recognition prepared the King for a statement of reasons following. UNREQUIRED .- The first of these reasons was sufficient in itself-God had not asked for a uilding. This point is covered with cons detail and emphasis. (Verses 6, 7.) From the year 1491 B. C., down to that year, 1943, a period of 450 years, God had made His abode in a tabernacle. The children of Israel had been brought out of Egypt, they had lived in the wilderness, they had settled in Canaan; Moses, oshua, the Judges and Saul had flourished; yet, various occasions.

juring all that time He did not dwell in any house. Moreover, the institutions, customs and manners had all been arranged under givine di rection. When anything new was needed He had ordered it, and He alone had the right to order it. (Heb. viii, 50.) "To whom, then, at any time in all the history of the nation, did I speak, say-ing, 'Why build ye not me an house of cedar?' ' That question was equivalent to an assertion that God was satisfied with a tent. And if He was satisfied, why should any man, even the King, be concerned on this matter? It was quite enough to do the will of God, and not to go beyond the express disclosures of that will. MISSION.-The message which Nathan was apinted to deliver referred next to the m of David. It was necessary, inasmuch as he had desired to do what God had not told him to do, that the King should be reminded of his legitimate place and work. Briefly stated, it was surpose he had been taken from the sheep-cot I Sam. xvi. 2), and he had been prospered in al his way. His enemies had been cut off on all sides, and there had been given to him a great name like unto the names of the great men of the earth. And all that had been done, not for David's honor and pleasure, but for the nation welfare, that Israel might have a permanent atiding place (Verse 10) and might not be athleted any more. And as to his own house (Verse 2), about which he reflected, God had told him to build it and enjoy it (Verse 11), so that he need not feel uncomfortable because there was no house of God. The performance of his royal duty and the enjoyment of the perquisites and privi-leges of his office ought to satisfy him. In after years David added to this thought not recorded in this connection, which may have been communicated by Nathan. (I Chron. xxii, 8.)
of the temple, and having assigned two good reasons, the message of God which Nathan was required to deliver to David presented a series of encouraging promises to David, calculated to reconcile the King to the divine will. The first of these promises pertained to the successi-When his days should be fulfilled David's own sen should ascend the throne. To an Ori this promise would be extremely gratifying. Throughout all Eastern lands a man in anciduring fame. This was true of David more than any other. He had seen the house of Saul, including the beautiful Jonathan, go to ruin, and had contemplated the calamity with intense paia he held his family close to his heart, and longed for the welfare of each. (II Fam. xviii, 23.) BUILDER.-But the promise of a son to reign was made more comforting by the promise that he should build the house of God. What David was forbidden to do, his successor, Solomon, would do. This promise contained several ele ments worthy of notice. The temple would be wilt; the thing proposed was not improper. Daoriginated in his own mind and that it was approved, although its realization would be de-layed. If Solomon should build it, that implied that he would have a zeal for God, and that must have been a source of much comfort to his father-it would give character and purpose to Solomon's reign, which would be in many respects a continuation of David's. Besides, if the son would do what the father desired to do, that fact would bind the two together, the one comunicating, the other receiving, and both coworking. Finally, possessed of this intelligence, David might devote the remainder of his life to the collection of materials and funds, as he actually did (I Chron. xxix, 2), for the temple, and find great pleasure in that employment. SUPPORT.-What is a man without God? What can be do? What can be accomplish? ncrant and weak, even when other men think tim to be wise and strong, his best undertaking are liable to fail. The world's history sets forth the folly of men. What is builded in one generaticn needs to be reformed or torn down in another generation. Only as men are enlightened guided and strengthened by the Almighty doe their work endure. (I Sam. xiv. 15.) David might therefore appropriately desire to know whether God would support his son when he became King and when he attempted to build the temple. The third promise covered this point. God would be a father, and would act a fat part, punishing for iniquity, but never w ing mercy. (Verses 14 and 15.) In this way the new King, by the justice and goodness shown, would learn righteeusness. This support so promised would not be limited to the next generation, but would be extended, so that the Without doubt this part is Messianic. (Psalm lxxxix, 26.)

INSTRUCTIONS.-We may learn by this pas sage that God has a plan in promoting His and other things at other times. Men are called for places and seasons, to each man his appropriate work. (Acts ix, 15.) Every one must b careful to know his appointed task (Acts ix. 6). and to be content with that, thereby making pos-rible the work of those who come after. Pathers transmit to their sons their unfinished plans. streets, was appointed administratrix of and skill of a prior generation, to be used in the estate of her dead husband yesterday. and one generation receives the products of tol together (I Cor.
